

Environmental Leaders, Cabinet Secretaries to Participate in First White House Environmental Justice Forum

Event streaming live tomorrow via White House website

Dear Friends,

As you may know, the first White House Forum on Environmental Justice will take place on Wednesday, December 15 from 10 am until 4:30 pm EST. Due to overwhelming interest in the event and to provide access to those unable to attend the Forum, the event will be streaming live on the White House website. The live video stream will be available at www.whitehouse.gov/live.

The event will bring together environmental justice and community leaders, Cabinet members, and senior officials from Federal, state, local and tribal governments for a discussion on creating a healthy and sustainable environment for all Americans. All California Environmental Justice Alliance organization members including Environmental Health Coalition will be in attendance.

In addition, the White House will hold a live chat from 12:50 pm to 1:35 pm EST with Nancy Sutley, Chair of Council on Environmental Quality and EPA Administrator, Lisa Jackson. Chair Sutley will take questions from students and young environmental justice advocates from Occidental College and around Southern California, as well as from the public via Facebook.

Questions can be submitted on the White House Facebook page at: apps.facebook.com/whitehouselive/ on December 15. This event will also be broadcast live on www.whitehouse.gov/live.

2727 Hoover Ave., Suite 202 | National City, CA 91950 US

This email was sent to jasonb@environmentalhealth.org. To ensure that you continue receiving our emails, please add us to your address book or safe list.