Barrio Logan residents who support Props B and C claim pollutants coming from nearby industrial businesses are putting their health at risk. However, San Diego 6 News spoke with the opposition, who claimed passing the ballot measures will bring on even more harmful effects.

“Our children are constantly sick and we just want to get to the bottom of this,” said Elvia Martinez, who supports Props B and C. Martinez said her son developed severe asthma around the age of two.

“It all had to do with the company next door and not just this company but other companies and all the toxins they put out there that are killing our children,” Martinez said.

According to Martinez, her son’s asthma dramatically improved after the metal resurfacing facility next door to her home, “Master Plating” relocated in 2002.

Williams said since 1987, her group has been looking specifically at the chemicals on site and businesses in the Barrio Logan community.

“There are many sources of air pollutants that impact this community; what we’re looking at as far as the land use, the community plan updates are ones right in the immediate area of homes and schools,” Williams said.

While existing commercial properties are protected by law, according to the measure, voting yes on Props B and C would prevent future industrial businesses from coming into the Barrio Logan neighborhood. However, Derry Pence, President of the Port of San Diego Repair Association said there is no guarantee that existing businesses will not eventually be forced out. He also disagrees with the notion current industrial businesses in the area don’t properly follow current environmental regulations.

Pence said places like Master Plating would not be in operation now, as environmental guidelines are much more stringent. He points to the Interstate 5 for the Barrio’s main source of pollution and said if Props B and C pass, things will only worsen.

“If you look around at who we are and what we do, we’re in total compliance; in fact, some are getting environmental awards for the steps they’ve taken,” said Pence.

Pence said places like Master Plating would not be in operation now, as environmental guidelines are much more stringent. He points to the Interstate 5 for the Barrio’s main source of pollution and said if Props B and C pass, things will only worsen.

“Just as a matter of fact, if you add up to 2,000 units, it’s going to make things worse in the Barrio from a health stand point,” said Pence.

While Props B and C would create a buffer zone between industrial businesses and home,
Pence believes it'll tear apart the ship building industry, which he said will ultimately hurt our National Security.

“So the only way we can ensure the ships can get underway, go do their mission, and return safely, is by maintaining these three ship yards along with 32nd street Naval Station,” said Pence.

Pence said he feared the ballot measure would impact the 10,000 local jobs the ship building industry supplies.

The decision will be up to voters in all surrounding San Diego communities. The election is on June 3, 2014.
PROMOTIONS

The Middle-LEGOLAND® California Resort Ticket Giveaway
Club Atlantis Ticket Giveaway
2014 OB Street Fair & Chili Cook-Off Festival Giveaway
CityBeat 5 Minute Film Festival Submission & Tickets
2014 San Diego CityBeat World Soccer Pick 'Em Challenge

NEWS

Seen on 6
Hot Topics
San Diego Living
Wake Up San Diego

WEATHER

Radar Maps
Daily Forecast

PROMOTIONS

Contests
Event Photos
Community Calendar

ABOUT US

What's On
Contact Us
Employment
Reception FAQ
Meet Our Team
60th Anniversary

© 2013 Bay City Television, Inc.
Powered by Broadcast Interactive Media.