

SPACE EXPLORER.

A hip new village in Mission Valley. Apartments & homes available now.

LEARN MORE

CIVITA

ALL	POLITICS	CRIME	BUSINESS	SPORTS	EDUCATION	ARTS	MILITARY	TECH	LIFE	OPINION	Search...
-----	----------	-------	----------	--------	-----------	------	----------	------	------	---------	-----------

LATEST NEWS Tension Over Vacation Rentals Spills into Clairemont

NEW! Buy & Sell w/ TRUSTED locals

Home » Opinion » This Article

Senate Bill Key to Environmental Justice for Industrial National City

POSTED BY EDITOR ON AUGUST 10, 2016 IN OPINION | 133 VIEWS | 0 COMMENTS | LEAVE A COMMENT

Share This Article:

Adriana Covarrubias

By Adriana Covarrubias

National City is a family-oriented community that is home to predominantly Chicano and Latino families, some recent immigrants and some who have been living in the neighborhood for generations. We have a strong sense of connection and a collective responsibility to improve the quality of life in our neighborhood.

Unfortunately, outdated land-use policies have made National City a dumping ground for decades of industrial toxic pollution. Walking around National City, you will find auto body and car repair shops every other block, despite school zones and residential streets. Approximately 32,000 pounds of toxic air contaminants are released each year. Not surprisingly, asthma rates remain disproportionately high and there is a clear lack of green space and affordable housing.

Many of the challenges in National City trace back to poor land use planning, which is a leading cause of environmental inequities across California. Discriminatory land use practices have put the overwhelming majority of polluting industries in the backyards of the most disenfranchised, right next to our homes and schools. We've had enough. Low-income communities and communities of color like National City suffer from high levels of pollution, leading to higher rates of asthma and other respiratory diseases.

Opinion

Empty rectangular box for comments or additional text.

GET TIMES OF SAN DIEGO BY EMAIL

Our free newsletter is delivered at 8 a.m. daily.

Email Address*

* = required field

SUBSCRIBE

In National City, community leaders are taking a stand so that residents in our neighborhood have a voice in land-use decisions, which will help our families and children breathe easier.

Right now, the legislature is considering Senate Bill 1000 by Sen. Connie Leyva, a bill that will require cities and counties to have an environmental justice element, or environmental justice goals, policies and objectives, in their general plans. A general plan sets forth the vision and goals for a city's future. An environmental justice element provides an institutional mechanism to assist cities and counties in identifying and meeting the needs of the most vulnerable neighborhoods within its boundaries, which can also help it access public funding. Unfortunately, many cities fail to prioritize environmental justice and equity in land-use planning.

The powerful advocacy and organizing of residents in National City on the local and statewide level have ensured that our vision for equitable land use becomes a reality. For over 10 years, the Environmental Health Coalition has been working with local residents to develop, pass and implement a neighborhood vision in partnership with the city that reflects our aspirations for a healthy community.

The Westside Specific Plan, adopted in 2010, helps to ensure a vibrant, healthy community with affordable housing, public transportation, safe pedestrian walkways, compatible land uses and increased use of clean energy. This plan was a springboard for city-wide land use planning efforts. In 2011, National City became the first city in California to adopt a full environmental justice element.

National City residents deserve to breathe clean air — just like families, friends and children in every other community — and Senate Bill 1000 is the critical step we need to take to get there. We need to pass SB 1000 to ensure that all local governments will proactively plan for and address environmental justice concerns when developing long-term goals, policies, and visions for the growth of their cities.

We have an environmental health crisis in our state and we can't afford to continue to make land-use decisions that harm our communities and our climate. When one community is made healthy and strong, the region as a whole becomes healthy and strong — and in turn, when one community is neglected, the entire region suffers and falls behind in the struggle for a healthier future in the face of climate change and industrial pollution.

Which will we choose?

Adriana Covarrubias is a resident of National City and a member of the Environmental Health Coalition.

>> Subscribe to Times of San Diego's free daily email newsletter! Click here

Follow Us:

POSTED IN OPINION | TAGGED ADRIANA COVARRUBIAS, CONNIE LEYVA, ENVIRONMENTAL JUSTICE, INDUSTRIAL POLLUTION, NATIONAL CITY, SENATE BILL 1000

MOST POPULAR TODAY

- Mini Cooper Fatality Named: Elizabeth Sandoval of Spring Valley 680 views
- Election Fraud? Get Ready for Martial Law 639 views
- San Diego Attorney Gets 5 Years for Funneling $12M 430 views
- Opinion: The Day I Wasn't Politically Correct — and Lost 2 Friends for Life 425 views
- Backers of Half-Cent Tax Hike Mislead in Ballot Statement, Suit Says 220 views

SUPPORT TIMES OF SAN DIEGO

JUST MOVED?
YOU COULD GET HEALTH
COVERAGE NOW.

CHECK ELIGIBILITY >

Times of San Diego is a free news website that depends on advertising and your voluntary contributions. If you like what you're reading, please contribute! The suggested contribution is $10 per year via the secure PayPal system.

Related

San Diego City Attorney Goes for the Gold Medal on His Way Out

Education Key to Protect Family and Property from Wildfires

How and Why Regents Road Bridge Promises Were Broken

Hiroshima, a Modern City with a Symbolic Mission

CRUISE THE PANAMA CANAL

Explore Times of San Diego

Bonita Vista HS Teacher Denies Campus Sex with Boy, 15

Woman Arrested for Carrying Drugs and Robbing Bank in Chula Vista

Freeway Delays Expected Amid 2 Police Funeral Processions Friday

San Diegans Ranked 4th Most Obsessed with Pokémon GO

Powered by

Digital Growth Summit Playa Vista
Join 150+ digital marketers in LA on Nov 4th

Register Today

YOU MIGHT ALSO LIKE

Native Ads

The Dirt Says Hot, the Label Says Heart
Lace Tomus

New Dental Solution Taking the World by Morning Reviewer

The Internet's Best Framing Service Has
Huffington Post

Top 14 Healthy Drinks for a Healthy
MilkFix

hero

Turn kWh into your BFF

Finance your energy-efficient home upgrades.

SAVE NOW

Elsewhere Online

How Bad Was Ann Coulter At The Rob Lowe Roast? This Bad. →

The Latest Expert Super Bowl Picks Leave Many Confused →

ISIS Just Might Have Committed Its Worst Act Yet →

Is This The Start Of A Magnesium Boom? →

Yahoo Finance Is A Mess →

Mark Hamill Drops Big News About Luke's Death In New Star Wars →

CNN Panel Bursts Out Laughing At Katrina Pierson, Again →

What ISSI Did In An Iraqi Town That Has Experts Scratching Their Heads →

0 Comments

Sort by Oldest

Add a comment...

Facebook Comments Plugin